Writers’ Retreat At Historic Rugby, Tennessee
Award-Winning Novelist Amy Greene
June 17 - 20, 2015

Each morning we’ll take an inspiring walk together in the mountain woods before retiring to write on our own in the Thomas Hughes Library or in another of the village’s beautiful locations, then we’ll meet each evening in the parlor of Newbury House to discuss our day’s work. Individual conferences with the author can be scheduled during free time, for one-on-one writing advice.

Instructor fee: $200

Lodging package options:

• Complete package - meals and lodging: $105 + tax per night (private room at Newbury House or Percy Cottage with 3 meals per day)
• Lodging only: $80 + tax per night for private room
• Meals Only: $50 + tax per day for 3 meals per day
• Rooms reserved for June 17 - 19, with checkout on the 20th.
• To register, contact Kelly McCauley: rugbylegacy@highland.net

Amy Greene is author of the New York Times bestselling novel Bloodroot, named a “Must Read” by Entertainment Weekly and one of the Top 10 Novels of 2010 by Booklist, Kirkus Reviews and Amazon. Her second novel, Long Man, was named a Best Book of the Year by the Washington Post and the Minneapolis Star Tribune. Both novels were New York Times Editors' picks. In 2010 Greene won the Weatherford Award for Fiction from the Appalachian Studies Association, was a finalist for the Southern Book Award, and was named Tennessee Writer of the Year by the Tennessee Writers Alliance. She has lectured and conducted workshops all over the country. Her essays have appeared in the New York Times and Glamour Magazine, among other publications.